| Comments |
|---|
| I felt that since the instructor didn't feel it was worth his time to make it to class on time why should I give my all for his class. I was very angry when the instructor couldn't even make to class on time for one of our tests--he was 8 minutes late. The instructor expected us (the students) to read the chapters and do the homework on time, but he didn't feel he needed to be to class on time. Mr. Quiano didn't set a good example for his students. I was very disappointed with Mr. Quiano and felt if he gave a damn about his class he would have been there on time. |
| I feel that although the class was quite challenging...a little too much at times, it was very informative and educational, especially since most people do not have a background in economics. |
| When test day came, the instructor was always 5-10 minutes late for a 50 minute class and it made it very difficult to finish the test. |
| |
| I really like Fernando as an instructor, and would defiantly take him again. Although, he was NEVER on time, not once I don't think! It is a bit unfair when the students are expected to be to class on time, but the instructor can be ten or fifteen minutes late every day. Another Item that could use improving is that the material on the tests weren't always exactly what he said would be on the test. Sometimes I felt mislead. Yet, overall I think that I learn a considerable amount in his course and would recommend Fernando to anyone. |
| not a bad class but some of your test where extremely difficult especially the way that some of the questions where worded some times i felt kinda unprepared even after a lot of studying |

| |
| This course is definetly not easy. But I think the instructor should take more time to explain how to do the algebra problems instead of just throwing them out there. Also, maybe doing a review for tests. |

| Course could be more interesting if the instructor use more powerpoint presentation or media presentation other than course was really good. |
