

Fernando Quijano
Econ 201
12/2/03
2:30
30

I believe that the professor knew the material very well, but I didn't like the way that material was presented. I think you could have found more ways to mix things up, and try to make things more interesting. I find it hard to stay focused throughout the class because I get bored. And because of this I didn't think I gained a good understanding of economics. I also believe the tests were too hard. I believe that when half the class fails the exams you are doing something wrong. Failing half the class is not helping anyone learn economics.

The second half of Micro-Economics was just as effective as the first half. Fernando was well aware of his subject of study. He presented the info well and made class fun to attend. He always made the students laugh and gave everyone equal opportunity for everything. Tests were filled with knowledgeable questions that required class attendance. Fernando is a great instructor and I am looking forward to taking another class next semester.

I feel that, as expected, this is a very challenging course. The material was very foreign, and more time could have been allotted.

Online material available through the website was helpful.

Mr. Quijano,

I think you did a great job with this econ class. Even though my tests grades didn't show it. I learned more than I could have imagined. You really know your stuff man, and you're a great teacher to have. The class was super hard, but I really enjoy it. Was great having you as my instructor.

Have fun over Christmas! Send me a postcard!

Mike C.

Course content is a mixture of his teachings and book. His tests are the hardest tests I've taken compared to other classes. Quijano understands econ. Perfectly, but has difficulty communicating these ideas to students. The fundamentals of econ should be taught better too.

Mr. Quijano did a good job of teaching economics in a way that kept the student interested. I would definitely take another course from him even though the exams were hard. Oh yeah, the homework sucked but that's okay.

I thought the class was taught well but the concepts were hard to understand for me. I enjoyed his class and learned a great deal but am thankful that the testing is almost over. I studied hard for my C but I'm sure it was worth it.

Fernando- knows about economics too much and too well to explain it on a student level.

He has to remember we have NEVER been introduced to this kind of course before now. He makes things confusing.

I can understand everything until the test comes and the test is usually way different.

This class was more difficult in comparison to other DSU courses. The instructor kept it interesting. His lectures are very effective and he did not clearly define requirements for homework assignments. The book and website were very helpful.

He's an excellent professor but we cover too much material in short period of time. He's got a lot of spunk which makes the class enjoyable, though.

I feel that Fernando Quijano has a very broad knowledge on the subject of economics and that his way of presenting the material I both agree with and disagree with. I like the way that he explains the material. Should have had more in class work. A lot of shorter tests and quizzes should have been effective in the class. I enjoyed the class and look to possibly take more classes from Mr. Quijano.

The Fernando knows a lot about the class but the tests were too difficult for the class.

Mr. Quijano taught the class with lots of enthusiasm which helped and his thorough knowledge of the material make it easier to learn and understand.

I think you are a very good teacher. You really should slow down with you are teaching the class. I think a chapter for every day is way too fast. Other than that, good job.

The class is a great class and I couldn't think of anything that would improve it.

I feel the instructor knows what he is talking about and has great knowledge in this topic. But he needs to understand that his students don't. just explain a little more thoroughly.

Instructor is a microeconomics guru master!

The course covered a lot of information. From knowing nothing about economics I gained knowledge from many aspects of the economics. This class has been taught well.

Too hard on students

The class is a challenge but that is not a bad thing. You challenged us to think and learn. Overall, I enjoyed the class.