

FERNANDO QUIJANO
ECON 202
Spring 2001
8:00 a.m.

1. First of all, the class was hard but fair. But I do have a few things that bothered me. The tests are too hard. Not all of the material or phasing in them is not covered in lecture or text.
There should be an intermediate step between the lecture and the tests. Sometimes I only think I understand something the find out otherwise when it is too late. The instructor is fair and changes the form of the class when needed, but is still very difficult. I think the class is taught at a higher level than the text book. Sorry is not typed. I think that the instructor is an expert at economics. He could answer any question I had about the economy. Several times I would read the same thing he told me in a newspaper or magazine several days after he told me. I think that sometimes it is hard for an expert to plan things for a neophyte.
2. Fernando knows this material very well! Sometimes he teaches at a level above where students are at, but mostly he does a good job. He used technology very well and always had information for us posted on the internet. The fact that he knows the book helps for us to follow it better. That was a plus. I think I learned a lot in macro and I understand a few things I didn't know anything about before. The grading and tests this semester were good. I was glad he made more tests so we could concentrate on the material. The take home test idea was great! Homework, such as the spreadsheets, really made me think and use what I had learned. This course was hard, but I learned a lot!
3. Fernando knows the subject quite well and is able to get his message across effectively. He is knowledgeable about eh projector and power point. The tests and books worked well together. I gained a significant amount of knowledge in economics from this course. He was more than fair in reviewing for tests and giving us chances if we did poorly on a test. The homework taught me a lot. This course is more interesting than most other courses I have taken at DSU because the instructor is entertaining as well as educational.
4. I thought this class was a very good learning experience. I had a lot of fun. The instructor taught the class very effectively and knew his materials. I would definitely take another course from this professor.
5. More time explaining how to do the graphs. It's nice he really tries to help us pass. I feel if you fail his class it's your fault. I like how he did the final exam. He has very good knowledge of the subject. He seems to know more than enough. His use of power point and his other presentations that he does during are very neat, but also very helpful. I like his use of the internet and the computer. He makes us use the computer and it has given me more knowledge of the different things I can use the computer for. The homework and test were done fairly. On the test he had on them exactly what he said would be on there. He gave us plenty of time to complete the homework. In this class he uses more technology than in my other classes.

6. Fernando made the class more exciting than if he just taught the class, enjoyed him as a teacher.
7. I think that the spreadsheet assignments were very useful. It helped to both expand my knowledge of the subject and exposure to a new software package.
8. Felt Mr. Quijano had thorough knowledge of course, but maybe too knowledgeable. Hard to understand a lot of it. Thought some areas we covered were taught way over our head.
9. Mr. Quijano has a great understanding of Macroeconomics, and did a very good job of teaching the course. He was able to present everything in a manner which was easy to understand.
