1. Mr. Quijano was a very good instructor. Living in Southwestern North Dakota, we do not have the opportunity to learn very much about other cultures or the global economy. I was very pleased to have had the chance to do so by taking a class from Mr. Quijano. I liked that the students got to teach the last part of the class. We learned a lot from each other and also from doing our own research for our presentation. I didn't feel that the book was very helpful for this class. I felt that the handouts and lecture notes were much more helpful as far as studying for the test. I would definitely take another class from Mr. Quijano and would encourage others to do so also.
2. Positive: Mr. Quijano's experience growing up in another country adds a positive and interesting aspect to his instruction. Negative: At times, Mr. Quijano is vague when assigning assignments. This leads to persons sometimes spending time that is unnecessary or not putting enough time into assignments. Some assignments are also changed partway through the assignment being completed. This leads to frustration and confusion as to what is expected. Overall, an interesting and good instructor.
3. I thought the class went pretty well. These were a few things I had a problem with though. I didn't appreciate him sitting in front of us telling us we "suck" and can't write. That is wrong. If he thinks we have a writing problem, help us, don't yell at us.
4. The course was taught well; the teach part w/the presentations could have been a little more organized.
5. Fernando taught the course very well. He respected the students and did a fine job. The presentations need to be refined to be more effective.
6. I thought that there should be more homework in the class and that the grading procedures for the outline weren't clear enough.
7. Fernando is a very funny person at times, but sometimes he insults the class without even knowing it.
8. It was beneficial to do group presentations.
